BUCKS COUNTY

What is MRC?

In the wake of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, the George W. Bush Administration created a demonstration project with 42 community-based units to identify, train, and track volunteers who could serve if another human-made or natural disaster occurred. Twenty years later, the Medical Reserve Corps (MRC) has evolved into a national network of more than 300,000 volunteers organized locally throughout the United States and its territories.

The Bucks County MRC was established in 2005 and is one of five units in southeastern PA. It is housed in the Bucks County Department of Health and managed by the department's Public Health Preparedness Program. Learn more:

There are over 400 volunteers in the Bucks County Medical Reserve Corps.

The BC-MRC comprises of both health care providers and non-medical volunteers.

BC-MRC volunteers support the unit's mission, "To train, engage, utilize, and maintain the health and safety of our community."

BC-MRC volunteers must meet all unit requirements, including application & background check and completion of required trainings.
